Book Errors Feedback

[1] Contradictions

#1 Confirm. Already correct in the Consolidate Rules 20261006 version.

#2 Confirm. Error in 20261005 version of Appendices – corrected in Appendices 20261110 version.

#3 Confirm. Already correct in the Consolidates Rules 20261006 version.

#4 Both base game and extension should use the selection costs: Ogre 4, Troll 3.
These are the revised values (by T.P. Donnelly) after the first edition of the base game. My scanned image of the base rules (1982) have the corrected selection values of 4 & 3, and th examples paragraph reads: ”e.g. A troll and man, or a priest and two dwarves.” The Consolidated Rules 20261006 are incorrect, 2026110 version updates this.

#5 Confirm. Already corrected in the Appendices 20251005 version.

#6 No. “may use” and may carry” are very different. We need a clarification regarding:

- May use
- May carry
- May wield/wear/display
- May be the target of.

PV to draft clarification notes as part of next revision of the Appendices 2026110.

#7 No magic-users may take Strength Potion. Already correct in Appendices 20261005 version. The valid drinkers of Strength Potion are humans and those who “use artefacts as” or “have the capabilities of”, so the definitive list is: Hero, Woman-Hero, Man, Thief, Woman.

#8 The card is right. Error in Consolidated Rules 20261006 – corrected in next version 2026110.

#9 Revised combat is correct.

[2] Book says nothing....

#10 Confirm.

#11 Mutineers join with any pre-existing strangers in the area. Any treasure or artefacts the mutineers were carrying, wielding or displaying is added to the treasure pile on the floor that they

and any pre-existing strangers are now guarding.

Deserters are different. Deserters are removed from the game, along with any treasure or artefacts that they were carrying, wielding/displaying.

#12 Confirm. The Talisman must be wielded/displayed properly for it to take effect.

#13 Confirm, but also: The rules don't properly cover what happens when fighting ends and a Unicorn allied to the player party now has no Woman in your party to be loyal to (she died in the fight). You could suspect that the Unicorn becomes indifferent, and guards the treasure, as per the rules. BUT – what do we mean by "the treasure"? Does that include heavy treasure that the party dropped before the fight commenced? Does that mean that if you drop heavy treasure to fight, and lose a Woman in the fight, the Unicorn grabs all your dropped treasure?

(1) I tested this Scenario QSWS:
Hero + Woman + Unicorn encounter a Man with a Magic Sword.
Match the Woman (alone) versus Man, fixed die rolls so she perishes.
Hero then kills Man.
The Unicorn became indifferent, but did not protect any treasure, not the dropped heavy treasure belonging to the party, and not the Magic Sword that used to belong the the dead Man.
I think this is correct behaviour.

Does a Unicorn stand back until any fights are over, (like Sybil)?

I tested this Scenario MDYS:
No, currently the Unicorn fights alongside whatever strangers are in the chamber, even if a Woman is not present. Doesn't feel right, because how then does the "then it will join your party" bit ever work?

Does an indifferent Unicorn become hostile if a Thief steals from it?.
Can't test this yet (Unicorn reactions bug submitted).

#14 Confirm.

#15 Confirm.

#16 Confirm.

#17 Confirm.

#18 Confirm. Exploring a dead end uses up the turn. (Which makes it even more important that the hovering direction arrows should not invite the player to explore what they can already see is a dead end.)

#20 Confirm. It does not matter which is the leader between Hero and Woman-Hero, or between Spectre and Demon, since the die roll outcome is the same.

And following 2026-11-09 Artefact Matrices vs Engine Landscape:

The differences

See updated Appendices tables 2026110.